To U.S. Congress:

July 1, 2008

Subject: Energy Crisis, Green Plans, and World Human Advancement

The solution to the U.S. energy crisis is as simple as restarting human advancement through invention. Adopting my proposals to reform the proposed Invention Reform Act 2007 presently under consideration will ensure America's prosperity through providing inventors with the proper financial incentive to produce the ideas necessary to advance our society through the coming decades. By trashing the proposed legislation and beginning fresh with these new monumental ideas that I have created in this legislative proposal. These ideas will globalize the World's patenting system and ensure inventorship accuracy in order to restore the integrity of the patent system and rescue it from its current state of corruption.
